THE CHAPEL*

The campus lights, gay gleaming, one by one
Have twinkled and gone out; but still on high
The stars are left to share their watch alone.
Those silver-armored sentries of the sky
Now faintly glimmer through the steepled pines,
The marble pillars, beautiful as truth;
And far above, thy spire in radiance shines,
All halo-lighted with the prayers of youth.
If only thou watch faithfully and well,
Who knows, but into dreaming hearts may creep
Fair thoughts, born of thy splendor and thy spell
Of Loveliness? A world's hope lies asleep
Beneath thy solemn vigil, O thou still,
White guardian spirit of the college hill.

With the completion of the Neil Starr Lodge at the Middlebury College Snow Bowl, the College now has the best collegiate skiing area in the nation. Above is a view of the Lodge from the 50-meter jumping hill. Below a view of the Lodge and its close proximity to the start of the 3,185 foot Pomalift. From the interior of the Lodge the Pomalift operation (left) may be seen as well as the jump and other slopes. The Lodge houses a library with language listening booths, lounge area, snack bar, and other needed space. It also has an outdoor terrace and balcony.

MEMBERS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF PSYCHOLOGY*

ARE INTERVIEWED BY THE NEWS LETTER ON . . .

PSYCHOLOGY AT MIDDLEBURY

Although psychology—at first taught under the auspices of the Philosophy Department—has had a long history at Middlebury, the beginning of the modern period of psychology at the College was during the second quarter of the present century. Under Professors Charles Adams and Frank Howard psychology was divorced from philosophy, and in 1926 a Department of Education and Psychology was established. During the later years of Professor Howard's chairmanship, in the late 1940's, there were courses introduced in experimental psychology, in theory of psychology, and in other "uniquely" psychological areas.

The trends that were nascent during the late 1940's developed further under the chairmanship of Dr. John Valentine, from 1952–56. Then, in 1958, by Faculty vote and with the concurrence of the Department, the Department of Psychology was established, and the teacher training function was located elsewhere. However, teacher trainees continue to take Psychology courses as an integral part of their training.

Thus in 1958 Psychology at Middlebury took on much of the cast that it has today: as a discipline in its own right which is glad to recognize its roots in the humanities and the other sciences, but which is able to make its own way and its own contribution to the community of knowledge.

Q. What is the underlying objective of the work in Psychology at Middlebury College?

A. Generally our objective is to give our students a picture of psychology as the scientific study of human behavior. We assume that the facts of man's physiological functioning, of his experience with his world, and of his relations with his fellow men, influence his behavior.

Q. How is this purpose carried out in practice?

A. The ways obviously differ from course to course. At the introductory level we try to give our students a general conception of the work of the psychologist, of the problems he faces, and of his ways of solving his problems. In our advanced courses we tend to concentrate on one or another of the basic determinants of human behavior and to trace more minutely its effects on man's total behavior.

Q. Would you say then that your introductory course is primarily a course in the methodology of psychology?

A. No, decidedly not. We heavily emphasize empirical data and the conclusions drawn from them. However, we do firmly believe that no datum is meaningful apart from the context of the experiment that generated it. Thus, in talking about the conclusions drawn concerning human behavior, we must also talk about the experiments that laid the basis for the conclusions, and about the concerns that generated the experiments.

Q. How does this approach benefit students who may take no advanced work in Psychology?

A. We know that many of the students who take Introductory Psychology will not major in psychology. However, we feel deeply that their exposure to the subject must be fully as rigorous as the exposure of those students who will ultimately become psychologists. The underlying propositions of a subject matter are fully as important to the student whose interest in the subject matter is peripheral as they are to the student who will ultimately work directly in the field. For any student's liberal education the value of work in psychology is that it provides him with an empirical approach in his understanding of human behavior and also with direct contact with the data, ideas, and concepts on which objective study of human behavior is based.

Q. Is your introductory course also planned as an introduction to more advanced work in psychology if the student chooses to go on?

A. Yes, of course. As a result of his work in Introduc-

The Parents' Committee is engaged in a special project to honor President Stratton on his retirement, later this year, with the establishment of endowment funds-in his name-in support of visiting lecturers. As The NEWS LETTER was going to press, the Samuel S. Stratton Fund totaled $9,558.93.

Two Middlebury College soccer players, Keith and Dave Van Winkle, have been named to the All-America soccer team. Keith was named to the first team All-America Squad, the first soccer player in the history of the College to be so honored. Dave received honorable mention.

The College has received a grant of 25,000 marks ($6,250) from the German Government for scholarships to the Middlebury German School.

A $5,000 equipment grant of forty modern microscopes to the Biology Department has been received from the National Science Foundation.

While in New York City with President Stratton on January 18th, Mrs. Stratton suffered a mild heart attack. She is progressing very well in her recovery.

Gifts and grants to the College as of the first six months of the current academic year, totaled $361,818.83 in comparison with $343,935.91 for the same period last year. Included in this year's total are starting gifts for the Edwin S. S. Sunderland Language Center of $34,507.56. And an addition to the College's endowment of $103,666.38.

Construction of the Cecil Child Allen Hall, the College's new language dormitory, is progressing very well this winter with twenty-five percent of the work completed in early February.

The Department of Fine Arts is organizing a group to be known as the Patrons of Art at Middlebury College. The purpose of this group is to create and maintain a growing art center designed to stimulate cultural interest and to present works of art more effectively to the College and the local community.

Dr. Pardon Tillinghast, Associate Professor of History, will be on sabbatical leave next year. He will do research work in Cambridge, England, on Nicholas Cusa, a 15th century Cardinal, Philosopher, mathematician, and diplomat.

The News Letter thanks the many readers who commented favorably on the color covers of the Fall Issue. It is a pleasure for the Editor to be able to present another set of covers, in color, for this issue. The use of color on the covers was made possible by the loan of plates from "Vermont Life," and the utilization of color plates used for more than ten years in other college publications.

The College recently received an unrestricted grant of $2,000 from Sears Roebuck & Company under the company's new program of aid to privately supported colleges and universities.

A William H. Edmunds, '17, Memorial Fund has been established in the endowment of the College by gifts from the Chittenden Trust Co. and the Vermont Transit Co. Mr. Edmunds was for many years a member of the Board of Trustees of the College.

Students voted against the establishment of the Honor Code at Middlebury in a campus-wide balloting sponsored by the Student Association.

News of the COLLEGE

Among the students attending the College from fourteen different foreign countries is Husain B. Tamimi, '67, of Dammam, Saudi Arabia, who is shown consulting with his faculty advisor, Professor Karl L. Anderson. Prior to coming to Middlebury he worked in the oil fields of the American Arabian Oil Co. for nearly six years, and is attending the College on a scholarship from this company.

Name New Swimming Pool In Honor of Arthur M. Brown

THE COLLEGE's new swimming pool has been named the Arthur M. Brown Pool in honor of Professor Emeritus Brown who retired as Director of Athletics after serving as a member of the Middlebury Faculty for thirty-seven years.

Generations of Middlebury Alumni remember the kind and wise guidance of "Coach Brown" through the years.

Professor Reginald L. Cook, '24, captain of the track team in his senior year, five-event man during his four years with the Middlebury track team, and a member of the faculty since 1929, commenting on Coach Brown's influence on the student body said:

"Coach Brown represents to me the best that Middlebury College has always offered its students on-and-off its athletic fields, in confidence-giving friendship, in fair-mindedness in competition, and in a humane attitude towards sports. His first interest was always in the man within the athlete, and the athlete responded by wanting to perform well for the man within the coach.

"One of the finest experiences in my life in-and-out of Middlebury has been knowing Coach Brown."

Born in Troy, N.Y., in 1884, Coach Brown grew up in the same neighborhood with Professor Emeritus Phelps N. Sweet, a life long friend. After graduating from Williams College in 1907, he coached football at Drake University before coming to Middlebury in 1918 as football coach.

An outstanding athlete and scholar at Williams College, Professor Brown coached football for a number of years until Dave Morey took over this assignment. In later years he returned to football coaching from time to time. Coach Brown became Director of Athletics in 1926, but continued to coach track and cross country through the years turning out many outstanding runners and field event men.

Reminiscing at his home in Sarasota, Florida, on the highlights of his years at Middlebury, Coach Brown said:

"There have been many outstanding events during my years at the College. I recall particularly the announcement by President Stratton on April 3, 1943 that the United States Government would establish a V-12 Navy unit of 500 men at the College. As this came at a time when the men's enrollment had reached an all time low of about thirty, it was indeed most welcome, for it assured the continued existence of the men's college when there was considerable talk of operating only for women.

"It would be most difficult for me to single out any particular game or games as most outstanding for there have been many dramatic moments. I prefer to think of the calibre of the men who have played in those games and the wonderful associations I have had with them. For me, this has been the most satisfying experience of all."

Directory Binders Available

WITH this issue of THE NEWS LETTER, the annual Directory of Middlebury College Reunion Classes is again published for the fourth consecutive year (pages 19–44). In one more year you will have a complete directory and it will be revised over the following five years.

Prompted by a suggestion from Isabel Davies Emmerich, '36, the College Store has made available to Alumni-ae attractive binders—suitably enscribed—that will enclose all copies of the Directory published in the five year period and the corrections of the future. In fact, these binders could also be used for the permanent filing of your issues of THE NEWS LETTER.

Binders may be secured by writing to: The College Store, Redfield Proctor Hall, Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt. Please enclose your check for $2.25 to cover the cost of each binder and the postage. Allow four weeks for delivery.

tory Psychology the student will be able to approach advanced psychology courses with a higher level of critical understanding. If the student chooses to major in psychology we feel that his early experience of psychology's areas of ignorance, as well as of its knowledge, is perhaps the best inducement for him to start acting like a scientist, for him to start concerning himself with the kinds of ideas that generate honors problems, Ph.D. theses, and productive careers in research and teaching.

Q. Would you tell us a little about the Honors Program in Psychology?

A. Certainly. The Department's Honors Program conforms to the requirements and standards set up by the College. However, in Psychology we lay heavy emphasis on having our qualified students participate in the Program. Last year, for example, Psychology students made up one-fourth of all Honors students. This year, 50 per cent of the senior Psychology majors are doing Honors work. Their problems follow their own interests, and are nearly always experimental in nature, although we have sponsored several important theoretical investigations. We have found that our Honors students agree that Honors work has been their single most important undergraduate academic experience. Through this work they learn much, not only about psychology, but about themselves as scientists. Both of these are important to the student who is contemplating devoting his life to scholarship.

Q. For your students who are not qualified for the Honors Program is there an opportunity to conduct independent research?

A. Yes. In Independent Study every student, whether he is an Honors candidate or not, defines for himself a topic or small number of topics which he wants to explore extensively during his senior year. Even for the student who is not an Honors candidate, work in Independent Study may involve some experimental research. Needless to say, this independent research is completely in addition to the student's formal preparation of himself for the Comprehensive Examinations.

Q. Do the students have the opportunity to share the results of their research with each other?

A. Yes. Throughout the year we hold a number of colloquia which are attended by full Department staff, all the senior Psychology majors, and staff members from other departments, who have a standing invitation. In these colloquia the seniors present reports of their research. The reports are discussed freely by students and staff, and often suggestions are made about directions for further progress. We feel that this is an important part of the senior program, for it gives the students the opportunity to defend their ideas before the staff and their peers, and thus vastly to broaden their horizons.

Q. What facilities have you for supporting all this student research?

A. Up until this year our physical facilities were scattered all over campus, with an attic here, a basement there, and with quite unsatisfactory shop facilities for building much of our experimental equipment. However, with our move to Recitation Hall this year we have been able to coordinate all our research facilities and we are functioning much more smoothly. In Recitation Hall, in addition to our offices, we have a class room, an undergraduate laboratory, research space, an animal room, and even a small workshop which we are managing slowly to stock with necessary tools. Our new facilities in Recitation Hall offer a working arrangement that is much more efficient than any we have ever had before, and that should be adequate for our needs for the immediate future.

Q. You mentioned Ph.D. theses before. Do many of your majors go on to graduate school?

A. Over the past decade the number of students going on to graduate work from Psychology has grown markedly. Recently the percentage of our students going on to graduate work in psychology alone—and this figure excludes those who have gone on to work in medicine, law, business administration, or other fields—has run between 30 and 50 per cent. We are pleased also to say that these students have been admitted with important fellowships to outstanding graduate schools in both the United States and Canada.

Q. How do you prepare your students for graduate work?

A. Many of the students who major in Psychology are highly capable individuals with definite academic interests, and thus they are very likely to go on to graduate work. However, we prepare them in the same way that we teach any psychology major, whether he plans to go on or not. The philosophy that applies to our introductory course applies throughout our major program, although we do indeed try to tailor a student's program to fit his own needs.

Q. What in general, are the important fields of study for a psychology major?

A. We strongly advise our majors to take as much work in mathematics and the natural sciences as possible. Since psychology is an empirical discipline, we concern ourselves with problems of experimental design in all of our departmental courses, regardless of their specific content. In some of our courses, in addition, we offer the necessary laboratory work where principles can be tested and theory born. All these are necessary for the psychology major, and they coincidentally foster both the interest in independent (Continued on page 59)

SPORTS

By Sabin C. Streeter, '63

Football and soccer experienced very successful seasons in the early months of the current academic year. Expecting "rebuilding years" in both football and soccer, Middlebury coaches, players and students were delighted with the Panthers' winning seasons in these two fall sports.

The loss of Co-Captains Gordon Van Nes and Jim Shattuck plus starters Andy Ferrentino, Pete Steinle, and Gil Owren through graduation, left Coach Walter "Duke" Nelson with the expectation of no more than a couple of wins in pre-season expectations.

The football Panthers surprised everyone by compiling a fine 5–2 won-loss record and winning the Vermont State Championship. By doing so, Middlebury kept intact its record of winning or tying for the championship during the past seven years.

Defense was the strongest aspect of the 1962 Panthers. Anchoring the line that allowed only six touchdowns throughout the season, was Co-Captain end Al Ross. Fierce on defense, Ross was Middlebury's leading pass receiver with 11 receptions for 156 yards. Ross was named to the All-Vermont first team for the third time, and completed his collegiate career by being awarded the Texaco trophy signifying the most valuable football player in Vermont.

The rest of the sturdy front wall included five members of the first two teams in All-Vermont balloting. Returnee Gil Stanley manned the right end position well enough to be named to the second team. Junior center Dick Rapp, and underclassmen tackles Dave Giddings and Terry Fletcher attained similar honors. Guard Pete Kullberg was a unanimous first team selection—a just recognition for four strong years of Middlebury football. Other linemen who saw much action during the season were tackles Jim Doane and Francis Love, and guards Roy Crocker and Co-Captain elect for 1963 Don Elmore.

Co-Captain Craig Stewart directed the Panther offensive unit so effectively that Middlebury outscored its opponents 145–34. Stewart completed 45% of his forward passing attempts, scored 24 points, and did a majority of Middlebury's punting.

Wingback in Coach Nelson's Wing-T offensive was Dave Holmes. Leading Middlebury in yards rushing with 422, and scoring with 42 points, while being the second most productive pass receiver, Holmes was a first team All-Vermont selection. His ability and determination were recognized at the season's end when he was elected Co-Captain for next year's eleven.

Fullback Paul Fava blocked and ran powerful enough to join Stewart and Holmes on the Vermont All-Star team. The right halfback position was manned primarily by versatile sophomore Al Reilly. Other backs gaining much game experience during the year were sophomores Larry Leahy, Jim Hunt, and John Kingman.

With wins over Wesleyan 26–0, WPI 27–0, RPI 48–6, Norwich 24–0, and Vermont 14–6 in a "rebuilding" year, Coach Nelson has many justified high hopes for the future. If normal improvement sets in, the eight returning starters could easily erase the 10–0, and 12–6 back-to-back midseason defeats at the hands of Williams and Bates.

The scene on the soccer field was equally as rewarding. A record of five wins and two losses compiled by Coach Joe Morrone's team was better than even the most optimistic person dared to predict in September.

The loss by graduation of Capt. Dennis Williams at fullback, Pete Johnson in the goal, Ralph Ellis at halfback, and Pete Askin and George Rubbottom on the forward line, left this year's team thin on experienced players.

Defense was once again the trademark of the soccer team. Goalie Larry Ring played outstandingly all season. Allowing only 13 goals in eight games, Ring distinguished himself as one of the "stingiest tenders" in recent years. Protecting him ably were fullbacks Max McCormack and Jed Maker. McCormack played so well that he was awarded the Jerome Detmer Memorial Trophy for the most improved player on the team.

The halfback line was probably the strongest element on the team. Co-captains Davis Van Winkle and Dick Floyd, plus Stu Campbell and Co-captain-elect Mike Heany played superb soccer all season. Van Winkle made the All-New England squad for the third time, and won the Dr. Miner Award for the most valuable member of the team.

Up front Coach Morrone experimented with an "M" formation with much success. All-New England wings Jeff Baldwin and Keith Van Winkle ranked with the best in the East. Van Winkle led the team in scoring with eight points, while Baldwin ranked third in team scoring. At the inside positions were Carl Young, Jeff Joseph, Steve Brown, and Dick Ide. Although only Young, who led the team in goals scored, was consistently effective, much needed experience was gained for future seasons by this group of forwards.

With a fine crop of freshmen being looked to next season, Coach Morrone can justifiably look forward to a possible repeat performance of 1961's 7–2–1 brilliant record.

As the curtain rises on the 1963 winter sports season, indications are for productive seasons in both hockey and skiing, and possible improvement on the basketball court.

With the loss of only Charles Gately, goalie, and Pete McLagan, defenseman, from last year's hockey team which had a 11–9–2 record, Coach Duke Nelson feels that the potential of this winter's hockey team is above average.

John Weekes captains the hockey team from his right defense position. His all-around fine play during the past two seasons makes him a prime target for All-East honors this winter. The rest of the defense will be manned by inexperienced men. Goalie Bill Brian enters his senior year with little game experience, but has been with the Panther sextet for the past two campaigns. Sophomores Jobi Stevens and Larry Leahy will alternate at the left defense position with frequent aid from veteran Jim McKeown.

Dates Fryberger, national goal scoring champion with 56 tallies a year ago, leads what promises to be one of the most explosive offenses in Middlebury history. Flanking him on the first line will be lettermen Rick Coy and John Flynn. The second line of Barry White, Roger Lewandowski, and Ed Germond could be one of the best balanced lines in the East. Coach Nelson has the material to skate three lines for the first time in many years this season. Junior letterman Mike Devlin will center the third line, and be surrounded by sophomores Fred Stetson, and Dave Jenson.

The outlook for Coach Bobo Sheehan's Panther skiers is unlimited in potential. With the return of FIS team member John Bower and John Clough, plus the addition of Olympian Gordie Eaton things at this writing look bright for the ski team. Graduation took only Capt. Spence Jackson and jumper John Sinclair. These facts all point depth to support some of the finest college skiers in the nation.

Capt. Dave Hanscom will lead the 1962–63 Panthers in quest of the Eastern Championship and possible national honors in March in Utah. Bower, leaving momentarily for Austria to sharpen his already superlative Nordic skills, will combine with Hanscom to form an (Please turn to page 59)

32nd Annual Winter Carnival To Be Held February 21 to 24

THE 32nd annual Middlebury College Winter Carnival will open Thursday, February 21st, and continue through Saturday, February 23nd, with men's and women's ski events at the College Snow Bowl; and on campus, an ice show, hockey and basketball games, Klondike Rush, and Carnival Ball.

Major event this season will be the men's Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Association Championships with competitions in jumping, downhill, cross country and slalom. Among participating teams will be Middlebury, Dartmouth, Williams, St. Lawrence, Norwich, Harvard and the Universities of Vermont and Maine.

Displays of giant ice sculpture, created by men and women students, will glisten the outside of fraternity houses and women's dormitories.

An attendance of more than 2,500 is expected at this season's Carnival, which will get underway with a basketball game between Middlebury and Amherst Thursday afternoon. Middlebury's varsity hockey team will meet Bowdoin in a game Friday afternoon. Both events will be in Memorial Field House, where the Carnival Ball will be held Friday night and the Klondike Rush Saturday night.

One of the main attractions of the Carnival is the ice show, student written, cast and produced, featuring figure skating of a professional calibre, ice ballets and humorous skits. Traditionally, the program will include a humorous skit by the faculty and a whimsical one by little children from the Village of Middlebury.

At the Carnival Ball, Friday night in the Field House, a Carnival King and Queen, chosen by the students, will be crowned.

SUNDAY morning, Feb. 24, at 11 o'clock, the Second Annual Alumni Giant Slalom will be held on the Allen slope at the Snow Bowl.

Last year's race was an all male slalom but this year Ralph Myhre, Manager of the Bowl, advises that the women will have a chance to test their racing skills. Ralph will have the girls running the same course as the men, but the women will start first so that they will have the best of the snow conditions.

The field of racers for the First Annual Alumni Giant Slalom last February was impressive. A total of 23 alums joined in the fun with Jack Beckwith, '41, being the oldest man of the group. Rich Miner, '58, won honors for himself by flying in from Hawaii just for this race. Rich was in the U. S. Navy last year with an underwater demolition outfit and the Navy assisted with his flight arrangements back to Middlebury.

Icky Webber, '62, was the winner in the first race and he had top notch competition from such former Middlebury "greats" as Al Lamson '60, Bobo Sheehan, '44, Frank Hurt, '58, Tom Burns, '58, Lowrie Gibb, '61, Joe Jones, '48, Tom Jacobs, '51, Fred Neuberger, '50, and Marcel Cote, '57.

The Snow Bowl management hopes that the popularity of this race has spread enough among the Alumni so that the field will be doubled this year. The College cordially invites all alums to join in the fun and be on hand for the Second Annual Alumni Giant Slalom on February 24th.

Summer School Alumni: Please note that a copy of the Directory of Middlebury College Classes reunioning in June of 1963 (pages 19-44) is not included in your Winter Issue of THE NEWS LETTER.

mines of Peru and Chile, the newer manufacturing plants and shipping enterprises of Argentina and Brazil, present an analogous and even more volatile situation.

At the same time, these workers in farm or mine or factory, partly because of the apparent hopelessness of the situation, and partly from centuries of traditional attitude, are lazy, shiftless, and improvident. They work only long enough to get the next meal, and this is easy in the lush tropics. There is no pride of ownership except for what they wear on their backs; and no concept of upkeep and maintenance. We have seen many nice housing developments that are already returning to slum wrecks. Anything that is done for them, whether by their own government or by the United States or the U. N. is accepted as owed to them, without gratitude, and without any responsibility on their part. On the contrary, when that is gone or used up, they consider themselves cheated and are angry if more is not forthcoming. If some free service provided by U.S.A.I.D. is interrupted for a time, the U. S. Embassy is likely to be stoned.

THE RESULT has been extremes in politics. Under such conditions, it is inevitable that Communism should gain a great following. Demagogues have little trouble persuading the extremely poor that all wealth should be divided. The agrarian reform of Castro in Cuba stimulated tremendous enthusiasm, as agrarian reform is one of the great needs of South America. And of course, "Capitalistic" United States is the villain in the picture. Walls, sidewalks and streets, even churches, are covered with painted slogans or scribblings—"Castro si, Yankis no," or "Get out Yankis." Whether from intellectual Marxism in the schools and universities, or ignorant acceptance of demagogic promises of "liberty, justice, equality," the cries of Revolution and Communism are met everywhere in South America today. Most recently, Castro has been discredited, and Cuba is not so much of a rallying cry, but basically the situation is unchanged.

Political instability is therefore the usual picture. There are in each country one or more moderate parties; intelligent men, sincere, and dedicated to the nation's well-being through constructive progress. But their problems are almost insurmountable. Short of funds, faced with large budget deficits; struggling against a complete lack of traditional civil administrators; threatened by pressure groups and widespread strikes, and even by personal danger, these men are too few. The moderate parties are often divided among themselves, unable to agree on issues and on candidates, while Communists and extreme Rightists know exactly what they want. In fact, the extreme right and left often agree temporarily to make a moderate government fall. A crisis ensues, and the democratic process proves inadequate or even dangerous. Then the army steps in for the sake of stability, locks the Legislative Palace, appoints a dictator who rules by decree, and promises free elections sometime in the future. This is the present situation in Argentina and Peru. Paraguay is also essentially a dictatorship based on the Army, and very stable.

I am well aware that I am making generalizations that may be inaccurate in detail, and seem to treat South America as a unit. South America is a huge continent. It is twice as far from Caracas, Venezuela to the southern tip of Argentina, as from New York to San Francisco. It is made up of thirteen different countries or provinces, of different backgrounds—Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, French, English—with widely differing populations or mixtures of Indian, Negro, or European blood, and with climates ranging from tropical to Antarctic, steamy to arid. Each of these countries, proudly nationalistic, must be considered as a separate and different entity.

ON THIS five-months sabbatical visit, Mrs. Freeman and I have attempted to do this. Leaving Middlebury in late August, we flew to Venezuela, and to Merida among the Andes; we witnessed the Independence of Trinidad and Tobago; we visited all three Guianas, then followed the Amazon from Belem a thousand miles inland to Manaos. We studied the new capital, Brasilia; spent several weeks in Rio and Sao Paulo; and thrilled to Iguassu Falls. Through Asunción in Paraguay and Montevideo in Uruguay, we came to Buenos Aires for two weeks; then far south to the Argentine-Chilean lakes. We found friends in Chile and Peru, and fascinating excursions into the Andes and the Inca pre-Inca country. After Cuenca and Quito, we plan to go to Colombia, and spend January in Central America, returning to Middlebury for the beginning of second semester. The Institute of International Education has also asked me to serve it as a Special Consultant on study programs for American students abroad. I have therefore given special attention and careful visits to many of the South American universities.

It is evident that the democratic process cannot be successful in countries where sixty per cent of the population is illiterate, as in Brazil, or fifty per cent as in Ecuador. Figures are unreliable, for several census-takers were killed by the Indians in Ecuador in the last census! Strong efforts are being made in primary education, but for lack of funds, the law requiring it is generally unenforced. Less than half of Brazilian or Ecuadorian children go to school at all; the drop out is high after first grade. In Ecuador, one per cent go beyond secondary school; in Brazil, one tenth of one per cent.

My chief disappointment is in the universities, the training ground for leaders and (Please turn to page 59)

A VISIT TO A LAND OF EXTREMES

By Dr. Stephen A. Freeman

Latin America is a land of extremes. Here in Ecuador, one can fly in an hour from the humid tropical coast of Guayaquil to the eternal snows of Cotopaxi, the world's highest active volcano, along with twenty others nearly 20,000 feet in height; and in another hour down again into the steamy Amazonian jungles. South America has the longest mountain range in the world; the longest river system in the world; the highest waterfall—Angel Falls in Venezuela, and the widest waterfall—Iguassu Falls in Brazil; the world's most modernistic city, Brasilia, only a short flight from unexplored jungles inhabited by the world's most savage tribes. The deserts of Peru are as bleak and forsaken as anything in the Sahara, but are cut across at 50-mile intervals by the most lush and fertile of narrow stream-valleys. One has to see these things to believe them.

Yet the extremes of physical geography are not as significant or as dangerous as the extremes of social condition which we have witnessed. Stand in the beautiful residential section of Guayaquil where lovely villas, behind grilled fences, are surrounded by a profusion of tropical flowers; and look across an inlet to the slum district on the back river, so low that no drainage is possible, and there is no water supply, green scum-covered water stands around many of the shacks, garbage and refuse vermin-infested lie in the streets or smoke in little piles. Or walk with me along the Lake Freitas in Rio, among luxurious homes, and look up at the favelas or squatter shack colonies that rise in the ravines of the steep hills—flimsy huts of rusty tin and paper along muddy winding footpaths, where the refuse of each washes down onto the one below. Or drive out of rich, prosperous Lima, to the barrios where tens of thousands of illegal squatters battle frequently with the police in order to stay in their hovels of matting that cling to the dusty mountainsides. Or stand in the Army Officers Club in Caracas in halls of gold mosaic on polished marble floors, beside a tiled pool, amid every luxury that money can buy, and look across to a hillside where squatters have put up shacks of cardboard amid conditions that breed disease and crime. It is only too true that there are slums in the United States, but I have never seen humans living under worse circumstances, except perhaps in Hong Kong and Saigon.

The dangerous significance of this, and the central fact in any interpretation of South America, is that the middle class, socially, economically, politically, is extremely small. We have driven for miles through the great haciendas or plantations, where Indians or Negroes or Mestizos pick the coffee beans, gather the cocoa, cut the sugar cane, tend the sheep, or load the bananas, working for fifty cents a day. They have no share in the crop, and at best a small garden plot where they may grow yucca and bananas, or potatoes and cabbage, for their own use. This is essentially a feudal system, where the lord of the estate has full power over his retainers. The tin mines of Bolivia, the copper and silver to make him feel he is more a cog in a machine than part of a continuing educational process. Student newspapers provide forums in which all kinds of problems are discussed, and not just by the relative few who serve as editors.

Vice President Stephen A. Freeman is spending five months travelling throughout South America for the purpose of studying educational opportunities for American students in this area. He is visiting universities and examining foreign student programs in cooperation with the Institute of International Education. This interesting article was written in Quito, Ecuador. Dr. Freeman will return to Middlebury in early February for the start of the second semester.

But such a forum functions properly only in an atmosphere where the free expression of ideas—including ideas that are critical of the status quo, unpopular ideas—is encouraged. Of course it requires forbearance to grant freedom of expression to students hardly dry behind the ears, who may use this privilege to question the motives and abilities of distinguished scholars and educators. Of course it may demand patience beyond the ordinary to concede that the student critic—however wrong-headed he may be—should be permitted to express his opinions.

But aren't patience and forbearance in the face of student error and abuse essential qualities of educators? Surely they are if the teacher or administrator accepts as one of the basic tenets of a liberal education that the developing mind must be encouraged to test and stretch itself, to put its convictions and its critical judgments into words—even when they may be wrong.

UNFORTUNATELY, other considerations come ahead of education in the minds of some college administrators today. They have come to regard students almost as a nuisance, who get in the way of the perfectly functioning administrative machine. They are not so much concerned that students shall have an opportunity to whet their critical faculties as that students shall not rock the boat at all.

One can almost sympathize with the plaintive declaration of one such administrator, sorely tried by what an outspoken student editor had written:

Habitually I am called upon to explain why the University's attitude is thus-and-so, when, as a matter of fact, it is the (student newspaper's) attitude and not the University's which I am called upon to explain. I see no reason why I or anyone should be put to the trouble which this involves. Indeed I see no reason why educational funds . . . should be expended to subsidize a project which adds to our difficulties and troubles.

Poor fellow! His is indeed a thankless job. He must watch out for his university's relations with a board of regents, a legislature, an alumni association, and a whole state's population—none of which is likely to set much store by the ideas "those crazy college kids" are prone to propound. But in his concern with all these, he has lost sight of his first responsibility, which is the education of the young. And the young are a troublesome, feisty lot. They will explore the frontiers of knowledge, and sometimes venture far beyond, instead of being content to be indoctrinated with the safe and tried. They will express new and revolutionary notions. They will be critical and altogether disrespectful of their older and so much wiser mentors.

THE genuinely wise educator knows this, of course. Not only does he expect that young people will be critical; he encourages them to speak their minds. He recognizes that this is an essential aspect of the educational process. That is why he leaves them free to give tongue to heresy, and why he recognizes that a free and yeasty student newspaper is important.

One hopes that students who undertake to edit and publish a newspaper will assume a measure of responsibility commensurate with the freedom granted them. And, with an occasional exception, college editors want nothing so much as to be regarded as reliable and responsible.

Freedom provides a stimulus to responsibility. For once a student knows he will get either credit or blame for the job he does as editor, he begins to be concerned about his own reputation. He seeks advice before he acts, where otherwise he would wait for a higher authority to correct his errors. He begins to learn the essential lesson that freedom never really is earned until the individual proves that he can exercise it responsibly.

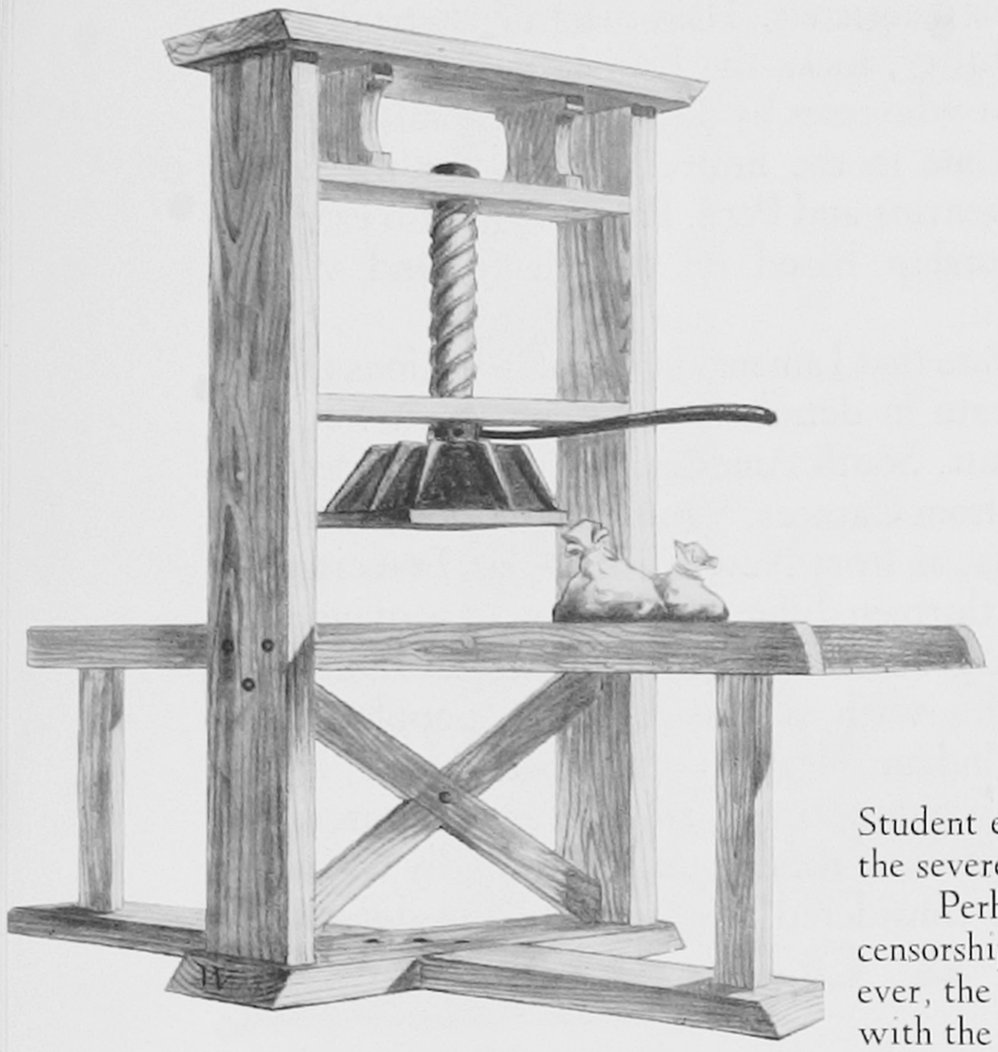
In this way, the college press stimulates not just the critical faculty in the student, but also helps develop that more sophisticated faculty—the responsible exercise of freedom—which can be cultivated in no other way. The notion that responsibility can be injected intravenously and that, enough of it having been administered, freedom can subsequently be substituted in the syringe, is itself irresponsible and destructive. It is a favorite refuge of authoritarians.

THUS, the case for freedom of the college press, which is strong and persuasive, too often is put in its weakest terms. It has nothing to do with the protections the Constitution affords the press. What is at stake is protecting these very constitutional freedoms, which are based on a society whose members are free to examine and criticize all institutions. These freedoms will survive only so long as we make it a stated policy of our educational system to stimulate the critical faculty, not suppress it because it sometimes may cause embarrassment.

This is what our college newspapers can do, have done, and should be encouraged to continue doing.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Francis B. Shepard, '63, Editor-in-Chief of The Campus, introduces Professor Harrison's article "Why Should the College Press Be Free?" from the student editor's point of view.

As a journalism teacher at Pennsylvania State University and earlier at the University of Iowa, Dr. Harrison, a Harvard Nieman Fellow, has had close association with college papers and their editors. This article is reprinted from the Nieman Reports with the permission of the Nieman Foundation.



Why should the College Press be Free?

By John M. Harrison

Student editors throughout the United States work under a variety of limitations ranging from the severest types of censorship to virtually no restrictions at all.

Perhaps it is significant to note that at Middlebury The Campus exists under practically no censorship. Our faculty advisor must read the Editorial every week prior to publication. However, the Editor is entitled to his opinion and his right to print it although it may be at variance with the advisor's opinion. Only in a case where an editorial clearly places both the Editor and advisor in an untenable position would influence be exerted to prevent publication. In my memory of The Campus this state of affairs has never come about.

As the reader will see, then, the type of freedom Professor Harrison advocates below is already a reality at Middlebury.

We feel that working for The Campus increases one's awareness of an important responsibility: objective reporting of news and informed criticism through editorials.

By allowing the student newspaper the freedom it now enjoys, the College fosters an important part of the educational process.—Francis B. Shepard, '63, Editor-in-Chief of The Campus

A lot of hogwash has been written about the college press—its place in the educational scheme of things, how much freedom its editors should enjoy, the reasons why it should be free at all.

To invoke the provisions of the First Amendment on behalf of college editors is to miss the point. A newspaper operates on campus at the behest of administrative officials, just as do social clubs and political groups. Its rights and privileges are defined and limited by presidents, boards of regents, trustees and overseers—whoever makes and administers educational policy.

This is true whether the newspaper is in some degree an adjunct of the university, or operates outside the official family. The most outspoken and untrammeled campus newspapers today have little or no official status. The Harvard Crimson and the Michigan Daily are prime examples. Tradition confers on them an independence that is relatively rare.

Yet nothing prevents President Pusey from closing up the Crimson shop tomorrow. He could do it by any of several acts within his rights as Harvard's president. An unholy howl might go up from many quarters. But no constitutional provision could help the boys in Plympton Street one bit should he decide to take such action.

That he does not do so is rather a mark of President Pusey's intelligence and of his appreciation of the purposes student-edited and written newspapers serve in a complex university than of his acknowledgment that Crimson editors possess any constitutional right to say whatever comes to mind. College newspapers like the Crimson, like the Michigan Daily, the Cornell Daily Sun, and the Penn State Collegian exist precisely because the tradition of an independent student daily exists on these campuses. They are sustained by administrative respect for these traditions and the educational values they represent.

The reasons why the college press should be free have nothing to do with students' rights. They are at the very heart of the educational process in a free society. These will suggest themselves immediately to the educator who is genuinely concerned that today's college student develop a free and wide-ranging faculty for criticism. It is this faculty which is the mainspring of a free society. Its withering away has been widely deplored by critics of today's educational system and the graduates it produces.

Outlets for the expression of opinion by students are always needed. The need is especially great today when mounting enrollments tend to isolate the student, ful. It had even been suggested that the church could not survive, that its doors should forever be closed, thus joining the three hundred churches in New York City which had closed or moved to the suburbs within the past fifteen years.[1]

Thus it was that during this "low" period a Middlebury College alumnus, the Reverend Philip A. C. Clarke, '51, was summoned to the pastorship of the church. The picture presented to Philip Clarke in the fall of 1956 was not bright. He was offered the opportunity of rebuilding a crumbling congregation and welding together a diverse people of multiple backgrounds into a unified whole, while ministering to their spiritual needs. It would take the enthusiasm and fervor of youth, as well as deep religious convictions, to persevere in the face of disappointment, apathy, and unfulfilled hope.

There were a few dedicated laymen anxious to see the church survive, and they with persistence and relentless determination, as well as faith, helped with the rebuilding process. For each two steps forward, there was one backward, so it seemed, as the church struggled to cope with the membership problem. New York is a transient city; its people move constantly—to other parts of the city, to the suburbs, and to other parts of the country. In any group of new members taken into the church, three-quarters would, within a relatively short time, ask for letters of transfer. This high rate of turnover meant there was little opportunity for the congregation to know itself—for it to become a cohesive whole with a character of its own. It meant, too, the constant loss of loyal supporters and the constant need to replace them.

To help overcome this situation, a cheerful hour of coffee and conversation after the Sunday morning service was developed. For sixty minutes or so the members mingle with the visitors under the watchful eyes of specified "greeters" who make a point of introducing visitors and members to each other. Nowadays, it is not at all uncommon for a hundred or more people to linger after the church service and share in the coffee hour, basking in the spirit of friendship which pervades the congregation. For it is here, in this church, that people find "small town warmth and friendship and spiritual nourishment in what can be the loneliest city in the world."[2]

Following the Sunday service, visitors are invited to sign one of the several guest books, and it is from these books that the names of many new members are obtained. Once each month the list of names is taken by the members of the Fisherman's Club (as they describe themselves "fishers of men"), and personal visits are made to the homes of potential parishioners inviting them to make the Park Avenue (Please turn to page 59)

Faith and Fellowship Saved a Dying Church

By Marilyn R. Bruhn '47

In the heart of the East Side of Manhattan in New York City stands a lovely church, a venerable institution rich in history and in faith—the Park Avenue Methodist Church. The sturdy, wooden doors of this church offer entrance to a quiet sanctuary away from the rush and noise of the city. The warm, colorful, Florentine interior is saturated with an atmosphere of quiet dignity and individual love of God made the stronger by 125 years of worship. Some three hundred or more members renew their spiritual lives here, while many visitors are captured by its quiet charm and return time and again.

Some years ago, however, the church had fallen upon bad times and during the post-war era membership reached its lowest ebb. Over the lifetime of the church there had been many difficulties—indifference, internal dissension, depression, population shifts—but all these had been surmounted. At this time of the mid-forties and early fifties membership was down to a bare hand-

Middlebury's Long-Time Faculty

ALAN CARTER

ALAN CARTER joined the Middlebury College faculty in 1939 as an instructor of music and has spent the intervening twenty-three years enriching the lives of the many generations of Alumni-ae who have had the pleasure of taking his music courses.

In 1955, he was appointed a full professor, department chairman, and awarded an honorary degree—Honorary Doctorate of Music—by the University of Vermont.

Born in 1904, in Greenwich, Conn., he received his education in the United States, France and Germany. Before coming to Middlebury, Professor Carter taught violin and viola in New York and played in the Cremona String Quartet from 1930 to 1936.

In 1934, Professor Carter founded the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra and has been its musical director during the past twenty-eight years. He inaugurated educational television in Vermont in 1956 with a series on music for elementary schools in cooperation with the Vermont Department of Education, and the Vermont Symphony Orchestra Association. It has been suggested that readers of The News Letter be privileged to request guided reading lists, prepared and annotated by faculty members in different subject areas. In an effort to provide our Alumni, and other readers, with the opportunity for continued self-education, I shall be happy to obtain such information and include it in the Faculty Page of future issues of The News Letter.

Professor and Mrs. Merriman, and fourteen year old son—Woody, have returned from a ten months tour of Europe and the Middle East. Sojourns of some length in Yugoslavia, Greece, and Israel were included in the tour. Professor Merriman has written the following interesting report of their experiences and observations.

Some Sabbatical Observations

By Lockwood Merriman

Associate Professor of English

It is indeed a pleasure to have this opportunity to share with readers of The News Letter some of my impressions, and those of my family, of our travels in Europe and the Middle East. Like the numerous slides we took, these impressions are in sort of a "hit-or-miss" form at this writing and haven't yet been sorted out.

We all vividly remember the "worst storm on record" crossing the Adriatic Sea in a small Yugoslav vessel (1,100 tons). Fifteen meter waves and winds the first mate reported were "a hundred kilometers per hour." We were too frightened to be sea sick.

We were particularly impressed with the work both the Greek government and CARE are doing to improve the lot of the Greek peasant; and Woody, who showed a penchant for picking up odd languages and meeting dignitaries, cherishes his half-hour private audience with Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis and his later meeting with the new American Ambassador to Greece, Henry R. Labouisse, whose wife is the daughter of the Nobel Prizewinning chemist, Eve Curie.

For me, I would say one of the high spots was the several weeks of digging for archaeological treasures in Israel. I was very lucky to be working with Dr. Moshe Dothan, director of the Israeli Department of Antiquities. We unearthed art objects and mosaics from the ruins of two synagogues of the third and fifth centuries A.D., two miles south of Lake Tiberias, which in Biblical times was known as the Sea of Galilee.

I had become interested in archaeology at the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, and from that start there I was now doing what I had for a long time yearned to do: actual "digging" in a very interesting part of the world. We were excavating in corner wall areas of these synagogues which, as indicated from two different levels of mosaic tile floorings, are one on top of the other.

Among other objects we unearthed clay oil lamps, such as the "foolish virgins" of the Bible carried. Brick red, they were shaped like flattened pots with snouts to hold wicks and a round hole for oil and were ornamented with various figures sculpted by Jewish and Arab artists. The laboring crew for this work included about thirty Bedouins who were all named either "Dahvid," "Abr'ham," or "Mahahmed," for that's all they seemed to shout at each other. They wielded the pickaxes and lugged the "sals," and sometimes smashed lamps. Two very good friends were the artists of the expedition, one Dutch and the other Jewish-American, who were making life size and three-foot square drawings in color of the magnificent mosaic floor of the fifth century synagogue.

We were deeply impressed by modern Israel. It's a dynamic nation. And it is going forward with energy under the capable leadership of some of the finest minds in the free world. This young nation is a friendly pro-West segment in an un-Western area of the world.

Since Israeli ships are not allowed by Egypt to use the Suez Canal, the major condition of all Israeli planning is the development of the Negev region, mostly desert, in the southern half of the country, for access to the Red Sea. The great long-range plans for piping down the water from Lake Tiberias, which is fed by the River Jordan, is a continuing cause of annoyance, friction, and sometimes shooting between Arabs and Jews.

I feel that it is unlikely even in the long run that the Israeli-Arab problem will be "solved." There is a no-man's land, for example, between Israel and Jordan, and anyone who ventures into it stands a very good chance of being shot. It is more than ironic that at the same time the quarter of a million Arabs in Israel themselves have the highest standard of living of any Arabs in the world and are guaranteed complete freedoms of franchise and representation.

Curiously, Israel has a different but very real racial problem of its own. There are "white" Jews and "black" Jews, with quite a cleavage between them, as marked as that in our South or that in South Africa. The European Jew—from Poland, Russia, or Germany—is "white." The Oriental Jew—from Yemen, Morocco, or Algeria—is "black." Predominantly illiterate at least at first this "black" is handicapped and in a sense discriminated against (not officially of course), and this situation is worsened by the fact that they are bidding fair now to outnumber the "white."

With the reader's permission I would like to jump to another country: Yugoslavia (Jugoslavija). Marshall Tito is everywhere. Sure, you see his picture in every window and on every billboard. But it isn't just that alone. You sense his personality all over the country. You feel him almost personally everywhere from Zagreb to Dubrovnik to Beograd.

We drove down the Dalmatian Coast after leaving Rijeka. All this section of the country is beautiful, the water very blue, and the mountains very rocky. Rijeka, incidentally, is the largest seaport and is quite modern, industrial, and very busy: There were eight very large Russian freighters and tankers in port. The place is a well known funnel for international intrigue.

Farther south, in Split, famous Adriatic Sea resort of the Roman Empire in the second and third centuries, we roamed the gigantic palace of the Roman Emperor Diocletian, a large part of which is still intact. This palace takes up two city blocks. It is partly rubble, partly restored, partly exactly as it was when the Emperor occupied it, and in parts it has modern apartments built within its walls.

This issue of The News Letter presents the fourth section of an Alumni Directory with classes having reunions in June of 1963. We plan to continue this practice of publishing a directory of reunioning classes each year in the Winter Issue of The News Letter. In one more year you will have a complete directory and it will be revised over the following five years. The pages may be removed without disturbing The News Letter and margins are sufficient to allow you to punch and file in a looseleaf notebook. This will eventually give you a directory of which the oldest section is five years old. This is much better than most college directories that are revised at the earliest in the tenth year. It is our hope that this information will help you to keep closer contact with members of your class.

Space requirements made certain policy decisions necessary. Abbreviations were used throughout when necessary. Asterisked (*) names indicate Alumni-ae who had not returned their information inquiry cards at the time this directory was going to press. Thus, the addresses, etc., pertaining to these members of the Middlebury family are shown as they appear in the files of the Alumni Office.

Some Alumni-ae are listed "Address Unknown." If you have information about these men and women, please send it to your Alumni Office.

BOOKS TO READ

Edited by Margaret L. Fayer, Librarian

The lead article in this issue of Books to Read has been written by Dr. Grace S. Davis, Curator of Special Collections, and deals with the Thoreau Collection in the Abernethy Library and Thoreau's international influence. Brief mention is also made of a few new books in the general collection of the College Library by Middlebury people.

Middlebury college's Abernethy Library of American Literature is continually gaining recognition among American and world scholars who consult the resources of this valuable collection. Present-day writers are turning out many new books each year on the works and lives of the major American authors—Bryant, Cooper, Dana, Emerson, Frost, James, Melville, Thoreau, Whitman, and many new contemporary authors. The two top favorites as subject for books at the present time are Robert Frost and Henry David Thoreau; and the fine sources, both primary and secondary, found in the Abernethy Library have been used extensively by a number of writers recently.

A Thoreau Profile, by Milton Meltzer and Walter Harding, has just been published (November, 1962) by the Thomas Y. Crowell Company. In this latest addition to the very large number of books on Thoreau, mention is made of the Thoreau Collection in the Abernethy Library at Middlebury College, and the assistance of the librarians is acknowledged. Reference is also made in the "Thoreau Reading List" included in the book, to Reginald L. Cook's Passage to Walden as one of "the best critical evaluations of Thoreau's work."

Middlebury college's Dr. Reginald L. Cook, '24, is one of the recognized authorities on Thoreau. Speaking at the Thoreau Centenary Commemoration in New York City last spring, Dr. Cook chose as his title, "A Parallel of Parablists." This scholarly lecture, comparing Robert Frost and Henry David Thoreau, emphasized the theme of the Centenary Commemoration—the influence of the philosophy of Thoreau in the world today. Thoreau's philosophy, it was pointed out, surprisingly parallels Robert Frost's metaphorical messages today. Writing over one hundred years ago, Thoreau, as so aptly recalled by Luis Zalamea in an article, "Thoreau Today" (Americas, March, 1962), "looks very contemporary against the desolate background of our times." Mr. Zalamea adds further: "Man in the latter half of the twentieth century, shipwrecked on the high seas of the atomic menace, asks himself this question, Can our so-called civilization be saved only at the cost of the crippling of the individual everywhere? In the face of this ever-present dilemma, it is as revealing as it is stimulating to turn one's attention toward men who, in their lives as well as their works, made of their individualism a powerful religion. Nineteenth century New England offers us one of the greatest individualists of all time, Henry David Thoreau."

Thoreau's message, striking a responsive chord in men everywhere, even while they "live lives of quiet desperation," is eagerly listened to around the world. This was significantly emphasized at the Thoreau Commemoration last May in the numerous cablegrams and other messages received at New York from world-wide points where the Centenary Commemoration was being observed simultaneously—Norway, Australia, France, England, Rome, South America, and Japan.

We find the emphasis repeated as we stand in the Thoreau nook of the Abernethy Library and count the ever-increasing volumes of new editions of Thoreau's works and the critical and biographical books about him. Attesting to the world-wide scope of Thoreau's influence today is the shelf of foreign translations of Walden and other Thoreau (Please turn to page 61)

A Study of Plants in Space

Characteristic bending of plant's stem when gravity is canceled is shown by Prof. Charles J. Lyon, '18, botanist who has been awarded a $50,000 research grant by the National Aeronautical and Space Administration. The NASA is interested in how plants behave in the gravity-free conditions of space because they may provide the best source of oxygen and food on prolonged interplanetary space voyages.

MAN may be able to withstand prolonged gravity-free conditions as the latest Soviet cosmonauts claim, but the plants that could be their source of oxygen and food on long space voyages go crazy.

Without the firm restraining hand of Mother Earth's gravity, plants, like wayward children, become twisted. Their leaves and branches fold back around the stem, overlap, curl or twist. Seedings roots often sprout "up" out of the soil instead of "down" into it.

In a recent issue of "Science" magazine, Professor Charles J. Lyon, Secretary of the Class of 1918, former Alumni Trustee, 1957 Alumni Plaque winner, former Class Fund Chairman, and Professor of Botany at Dartmouth College who has been studying and reporting on these phenomena for several years, describes some new developments in his attempts to pin down the causes of this behavior and possible cures.

As a result of these and previous studies, he was awarded a $50,000 grant last fall from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. His earlier studies in this area were supported by the National Science Foundation.

The NASA's interest stems from the fact that future interplanetary space travel might extend over many months and require huge oxygen tanks in vehicles in which weight and space are at a premium. On Earth plants maintain the oxygen-carbon dioxide balance. Men and animals breathe oxygen and give off carbon dioxide. Plants absorb carbon dioxide and give off oxygen. Plants, then, might provide a way to renew the space travelers' oxygen supply and also be a minor source of food.

Professor Lyon's earthbound space experiments involve growing potted plants such as Coleus under simulated gravity-free conditions. He rotates the plants in a horizontal position on a standard apparatus called a clinostat. It turns slowly, but fast enough to cancel out the effects of gravity on the slow moving auxins.

Gradually the plant's leaves and branches fold back around the stem, overlap and even curl or twist.

"The familiar upright posture of a plant and the precise arrangement of its stem, branches and leaves are essential to its health and growth and to its efficiency in capturing the sun's energy to produce oxygen and to absorb carbon dioxide," he said.

This all-important posture is maintained by the combined action of gravity and plant hormones called auxins which regulate plant growth.

Nature regulates this growth by transporting more of these hormones to the upper side of the branches. Gravity balances the situation by drawing the excess to the lower side.

With gravity counteracted, the balance is disrupted and growth on the lower side falls behind while that of the upper side speeds up in response to the excess auxin. This pulls the leaves and branches down and around. In the stem, gravity-auxin teamwork is somewhat different, but the results are equally harmful to the plant's form. Sometimes the stem develops a "curvature of the spine" that forms a complete circle.

Professor Lyon had compiled massive circumstantial evidence, but until last month had no concrete proof that plants would maintain their usual erect posture only if gravity is present.

His latest results, as reported in the "Science" article, show that gravity controls the one-way movement of auxin growth regulators down the stem in such a way that growth proceeds evenly. Gravity thus maintains a constant vigil, equalizing possible differences in the plant's nutrition, supplies of auxin and water relations.

Professor Lyon is now using a new method he developed in research on branches, adapting it to work on the main stem. He has found that he can boost the amount of auxin normally circulating in the plant by introducing the hormone from the outside. He cuts off the tip of the stem, removes the upper leaves to the severed tip and applies a radioactive supply of a typical auxin (indole acetic acid) dissolved in lanolin. By tracing the radioactive substance he can measure the relative amount of auxin that is transported to different sides of the stem.

The results he has obtained this summer with the new method confirm blow by blow his previous results using a bioassay method. This long, painstaking process must be carried on under rigidly controlled conditions of temperature and humidity and, because of its many steps, is far more liable to error.

Under his new grant from NASA, Professor Lyon will use the new method to begin his first studies of auxin distribution in the leaves. He will also carry on further studies concerning auxin in the main axis and search for the as yet unknown mechanism which causes the unequal distribution of growth regulators. "This mysterious mechanism is especially important in the leaves and branches," he said.

He also plans to explore the problems involved in growing seeds when no gravity is present to direct their growth.

"We don't yet know what species of plant will prove efficient as a producer of oxygen and at the same time provide a minor source of food for man on long space flights," he said, "but the odds favor the fast-growing, herbaceous annuals, which must be started afresh from seeds as each crop reaches the end of its vegetative phase."

Auxin is abundant in germinating seeds, Professor Lyon said, but we do not yet know how its distribution and transport will be affected by the lack of gravity and special physical effects such as vibration that attend space flight.

He has already carried out preliminary tests which show that the roots of a young seedling are strongly affected by even the slight vibrations of the clinostat apparatus. He has seen such root tips grow "up" through the surface of the soil in place of shoots. Sometimes sprawling shoots with shallow roots emerge instead.

He does not yet know whether the first young shoot of a leafy plant would also be affected by vibrations but he has observed that shoots growing on the clinostat emerge only through small cracks in the soil and, like mature plants, shortly become contorted.

Professor Lyon believes the disastrous effects of vibrations in a space flight may be more difficult to eliminate than those resulting from lack of gravity.

To prevent contortions due to gravity-free conditions and to restore space plants to their maximum efficiency, he believes his research may reveal ways for astronauts to apply suitable chemicals to the plants at the proper time, in the correct concentrations and at suitable points on the plants.

Why an Alumnae Association?

By Marian G. Cruikshank, '30
National President of the Alumnae Association

A recent graduate asked me why she should join the Alumnae Association as well as become a member of an affiliated alumnae club. I hope that she or any other alumnae who may ask this question will, by reading these few remarks, realize the potential impact of the Association not only on the College and all its component parts, but also on the members of the Association as they play an active part in the future development of Middlebury College.

As the Alumnae Association has passed the fifty-year mark, it might be well to examine its stated purpose, how it has fulfilled this purpose over the years and how it can work most effectively in the years to come.

Women had been attending Middlebury for several years before a group of alumnae organized an Association "to maintain a mutually helpful relationship of the alumnae with the administration of the College and with the women students." It is interesting to note here that our Alumnae Association holds a unique position among such organizations in co-educational colleges as its membership is composed only of women. The more common practice is for joint associations encompassing both alumni and alumnae. Herein lies a major strength of our Association, for it enables the women graduates to concentrate on the problems vital to women attending Middlebury which might under other circumstances become lost in the overall picture.

In carrying out this concern for the women students' welfare, several alumnae served for a number of years on a Women's Advisory Board, the purpose of which was to inform and advise the Trustees of the problems pertaining to women students at Middlebury. This Board served until 1947 when two women were appointed to the Board of Trustees of the College, and the Advisory Board was disbanded. At the present time, there are three women Trustees, one of whom is elected by the alumnae for a five-year term as their own representative. A committee of members of the Alumnae Association nominates the candidates for the position of Alumnae Trustee, one of whom, in turn, is elected by the majority vote of the alumnae. Candidates are chosen with consideration given to their previous participation in the affairs of the Association, participation which has made them cognizant of the relationship of the alumnae with the College and of the problems of the undergraduate women. As the women's representative on the Board of Trustees, the Alumnae Trustee can do much to fulfill the purpose of the Alumnae Association.

The Association concerns itself in many other ways with the needs of undergraduate women. Since 1936, a committee of alumnae has administered the Cecile Child Allen Fund. The annual income from this fund buys books, both classic and current, for the libraries in Forest Hall, thus providing for the girls in residence there a convenient means of obtaining reading and source material.

Mindful of the fact that one of the ways alumnae can best help undergraduates is to offer them financial assistance, thus giving them a free mind to pursue their collegiate careers, the Association has established two scholarship funds. Twenty-two freshman women, chosen for their excellence in scholarship, personality and athletics, have received the Marion L. Young Scholarship Award since its founding, and seven senior women, selected for their good scholarship, need and all-around merit, have been the recipients of the Eleanor S. Ross Scholarship Award. Surely this is a "helpful relationship" with the women students.

During the present year, the Alumnae Association is lending its support to the Dean's Purse, a sum of money used by the Dean of Women at her discretion to help girls quickly and expeditiously who may need emergency financial help to meet a difficult situation. Another "helpful relationship."

But as effective as these projects of the Alumnae Association may be, I think that there is a deeper meaning in the purpose of the Association for its members. In the rapidly changing educational world of the liberal arts college today, the part the alumnae play becomes of greater importance and significance. To exert this influence to its fullest extent, it behooves each alumna to keep herself informed of the changes that are taking place and the differences that are appearing in the academic, physical and social environments of the college which she attended. Today, more than ever before, the alumna must be in a position to realize the aims and directions toward which her institution is now heading. While sentimentally speaking, she may take delight in the ways of the good old days when she was in college and look with some trepidation on the innovations in the collegiate world, nevertheless, no graduate, truly interested in having her college assume and keep its rightful position among the colleges of our country, can have any desire for it to remain as it was. Rather, she will be eager for her college to keep abreast of the changes in the educational world of today, to provide the physical equipment to maintain a high quality of education and a faculty with the ability to inspire the students so that the prestige of Middlebury and its graduates' influence may be of no small stature.

Here, then, is another and very central purpose of our Alumnae Association, for is not such an organization the means of informing its members of what is happening to their College? The national Alumnae Association fulfills this function to a large degree through the affiliated regional alumnae clubs. Here, alumnae may meet together, reminisce about the "old" Middlebury, keep up to date on student life through contacts with local undergraduates, be aware of curriculum changes through faculty speakers, learn of admission problems from those of the staff concerned with the applicants asking for entrance—in short, become well informed on all phases of the college situation. An informed alumnae group is necessary if it is to play an important role in the life of a college.

The first fifty years found the Alumnae Association meeting the needs of the times as they became apparent, and I feel that this will be true to an even greater extent in the future.

John Talbot, is a mighty proud dad these days. His seventeen year old son—Jeff—has signed a lucrative contract with the Baltimore Orioles. Jeff graduated from the Stamford (Conn.) High School last year and is now attending the University of Connecticut. He will report in June to the Baltimore Orioles training camp in Miami Beach, and will play somewhere in this baseball team's organization through the coming summer. After the baseball season he will resume his studies at the University of Connecticut. Jeff figures that it will take him six years to complete his college education while playing professional baseball. The contract he signed provides an $8,000 scholarship grant in addition to a substantial cash bonus. While in high school Jeff was an honor roll student and outstanding in football as well as baseball. He is six feet tall and weighs 200 pounds.

Dr. James Cassedy returned to United States from Pakistan in the summer and is now with the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., as executive secretary of the History of Medicine Study Section; the address for him and his wife, Barbara Snow, '46, is: 5405 Harwood Rd., Bethesda 14, Md. Lt. Cmdr. Vernon Wright is a student at the University of Georgia; his address: 137 Meadows Dr., St. Simons Island, Ga. Samuel Perry is assistant director in research and engineering with the Department of Defense in Washington, D. C., and is living at 388 N St., S. W. in the city. The Rev. John Agnew is pastor of the First Universalist Church in Auburn, Me., and is living at 181 Park Ave. in Auburn. Dr. Charles Jones has moved to Walton, N. Y., where he is pathologist for three hospitals in Delaware County; the address for him and his wife, Ruth Packard, is R. F. D. 1, Walton, N. Y. Dr. Edward Loftus has been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the U. S. Army Reserve. He is commanding officer of the Menasha (Wis.) section of the 44th General Hospital, which is affiliated with the University of Wisconsin Medical School. In civilian life, Dr. Loftus is an internist and chief of Medicine at Winnebago (Wis.) State Hospital.

Carol L. Nicholson is presently one of nine women students at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. She expects to earn her Master in Business Administration degree in June.

How does a woman enter this school which is traditionally for men and in which 1250 men are enrolled? At this time, the only route is through the Harvard-Radcliffe Program in Business Administration, a one-year program at Radcliffe, taught by Business School faculty, for women in which the curriculum parallels that for first-year men at the Harvard Business School.

Carol entered the Harvard-Radcliffe Program with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics from Middlebury College. She graduated from Middlebury Salutatorian of her class, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She graduated from the Harvard-Radcliffe Program with high distinction and was number one in her class.

Once she has this degree from Harvard, which is the envy of many men, Carol plans to go into a small business in the financial management end. To prepare herself for this function, she is taking Financial Management, Investment Management, Management of Financial Institutions, Taxation, and Business Policy.

This past summer Carol worked for Socony Mobil Oil in New York City doing economics planning and analysis in the transportation of oil products.

When she starts her job in the early summer, Carol will join the ranks of the 11 other girls who have received their M.B.A. degrees from Harvard in the last three years. Several of these girls are, at this time, earning a yearly salary of $7,000 or over.

Eloise Francke Neuse

January 15, 1906—October 28, 1962

By the death of Mrs. Eloise Francke Neuse, Lecturer in German and wife of Dr. Werner Neuse chairman of the German Department, Middlebury College has lost a teacher who had an impressive record of achievement in scholarship, and in service both to her family and the College.

Upon learning of the death, President Samuel S. Stratton said:

"Middlebury College has suffered a grievous loss in the death of Mrs. Werner Neuse. She was an able and dedicated teacher who will be missed greatly by her colleagues and the many students who were privileged to know her. Over the years she was a stimulating teacher to hundreds of Middlebury students who were inspired by her scholarship and encouraged by her friendly concern for their progress as students of German. Mrs. Neuse always took an active part in all phases of our campus community life and her sudden death is a shock to all of us at Middlebury."

Mrs. Neuse received A.B. and A.M. degrees from the University of Wisconsin and did further graduate work there and at the University of Berlin and Theologisches Seminar in Herrnhut, Germany, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

She was a teaching fellow at the University of Wisconsin and instructor in German at Mount Holyoke College before joining the Middlebury faculty in 1947. In 1960–61 she was Director of Studies at Middlebury Graduate School of German in Mainz, Germany.

Mrs. Neuse is survived by her husband; three daughters, Mrs. Richard Whitcomb of Athens, Wisconsin; Miss Ingrid Neuse, Stuttgart, Germany; Miss Margaret Neuse, a student at the Northfield School for Girls; a son, Karl Neuse, a student at Williams College, and one grandchild.

It is almost superfluous to say how much she will be missed, not only by her colleagues, students and other members of the Middlebury family, but also by a wide circle of friends.

PSYCHOLOGY AT MIDDLEBURY

research and the enthusiasm for psychology that so many of our students have.

Q. In a recent letter to the Editor of the Campus a student who is not a Psychology major commented that the Psychology Department seems to be "instilling a greater curiosity and enthusiasm in their majors." Do you think it is your course program that is most influential in this?

A. The reasons for our students' attitudes are assuredly not simple. And certainly the students themselves deserve a large part of the credit. It was once said about Sir Charles Sherrington that he "seemed quite sincere in the expectation that each student would teach him something, sometime." Perhaps some of our students' enthusiasm arises from their recognition that there is much they can teach us. This is as it should be in any field whose knowledge is empirical. Indeed it is our hope that where we are ignorant they will know . . . if not now, at least sometime.

awesome duo in cross-country and jumping. The return of Pete Swallow gives the Nordic team another outstanding man. Rounding out this segment of the ski team will be Ed Hixson in cross-country, and Earle Morse off the jump.

Eaton and Clough will combine their talents on downhill and slalom courses to form a pair that will be tough to beat. Lettermen Steve Adams and Hank Tauber may add just enough poise and experience to allow Middlebury to win most Alpine events.

It is too early to tell, but, barring injuries, Bobo Sheehan's skiers may have just enough talent and desire to eke out an Eastern Championship and then capture the national title of collegiate skiing.

THE BASKETBALL picture is not greatly improved over last winter when Middlebury had a poor season. Co-Captains Craig Stewart and Walter Lucas head up this year's quintet. It is hoped that hustle and desire will make up for the general lack of height that prevails.

Coach Erkki "Stub" Mackey lost only Capt. Bill Jackson and reserve Larry Geller through graduation, but the remaining personnel still needs much improvement to win consistently. Stewart averaged nearly 20 points per game last winter, but is the only Panther capable of scoring with any consistency.

Lucas and Dick Maine possess more than adequate playmaking ability in the backcourt. Center Pete Karlson at 6′3″ and 6′4″ forward Bob Royer must perform well up front if this quintet is to achieve some victories.

Newcomers Reid Johnson, Dick Ide, and John Zawistowski add some of the needed depth, but from all indications the three losses to date are not out of character with the overall potential of the 1962–63 basketball team.

LATIN AMERICA IS A LAND OF EXTREMES

teachers of the next generation. Here, in spite of many learned professors and sincere administrators, the system is shockingly bad. Faculties are made up almost entirely of part-time teachers, who hold other positions, in schools or in politics, usually to make a living. Students likewise are almost all part-time, and hold a full job outside. Therefore, absenteeism by both teachers and students is the rule rather than the exception. The teacher goes to class if nothing else interferes, and finds 20% of the enrolled students present; he is therefore expected to distribute mimeographed notes; and final exams are limited to these. Classes are held early mornings, and in the evenings. Textbooks are scarce and expensive. No outside readings are given, or if given, are not done, because the books are unavailable. Most of the libraries are very poor and badly catalogued. Laboratories are also extremely poor. No practical work is given; teaching is by lecturing exclusively. In one university, a complete set of the Library of Congress Catalog sat on a top shelf gathering dust because the librarian did not know what it was for; and cases of laboratory equipment from the U. S. lay in storage, for lack of technicians to set it up.

Another part of the system which horrified me is called "co-government." The central Council of the University in most countries (except Chile) is composed one-third of professors, or deans, one-third of students, and one-third ex-students or graduates. The professors, being part-time, rarely take enough interest to attend meetings. The student representatives are usually the vocal agitators, Communists or extreme leftists, "professional" students who have been enrolled for a dozen years, never attend classes, and use the university for political purposes. Eighty per cent of the student body are apathetic and follow this lead. This, then, is the Council that formulates academic policy, decided the hiring of professors, and elects Deans and Rectors! Students are rarely failed in required courses, or there would be a student strike. Some of the universities were strike-bound several months last year, frequently around exam time.

The Faculties of Medicine, Law, and Engineering enroll the great majority of students. A boy with ambition for a higher education wants to be a doctor or lawyer, and not to soil his hands. So, in many places, doctors and lawyers, usually with mediocre training, are a glut on the market. Some prestige attaches to the teaching profession but small pay: the government, short of funds, pays them last. Secondary teachers in Guayaquil are now out on strike because they have not been paid for three months. The Faculties of Letters or Humanities in most of the universities are the smallest, poorest in quality, have the poorest facilities and the lowest prestige. An "arts" degree opens no doors. Worst of all, the universities, even the great ones like San Marcos in Lima, are not institutions for the impartial search for truth, but battle grounds of conflicting propaganda, where Communists and Apristas, extreme leftists and rightists slug it out, and Rectors and Deans are political appointees and party leaders. Many things must be changed before the universities of South America will be able to train the next generation right.

As usual in our travels, it has been a pleasure to greet Middlebury alumni, serving humanity in far fields—Ruth Cann, Class of '19, now in the U. S. Embassy in Rio; Bill Wright, in Caracas; Mrs. Martha Potter Crouse, '52, doing wonderful work in a Mission outside of Quito; Molly Dugan, '60, teaching English here in the Bi-National Center; Barbara Commiskey, '52, feature writer for Life and travelling; teachers in our Summer Language Schools like Dr. Tamayo-Vargas at San Marcos in Lima, and Señora Arce in Santiago; and many others, as well as many whom I did not have time to look up. My gratutide goes to all whom I have seen for their hearty welcome, and their helpfulness.

Mr. Messenger married Etta Smart in 1920 and they had two sons, Harold and Robert. He was a member of Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity.

1920—A. Pauline Locklin, 68, died unexpectedly on Dec. 3 in Anchorage, Alaska. She had been head of the English Dept. at Alaska Methodist University since 1961 following her retirement as a professor in the English Dept. of Pennsylvania State University where she had taught for 38 years. Miss Locklin had received a Master's degree from the Universtiy of Illinois and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Survivors are three brothers, Harold, '16, Dr. D. Philip, '20 and M. S. Locklin.

1926—Louis E. Lebowitz died Aug. 9, 1960. At the time of his death he was employed by the S. G. Krupka Co., Bridgeport, Conn. His wife survives.

1938—Katherine Whittier Kennedy (Mrs. John C.), 45, died Dec. 8 in Grosse Point Shores, Mich. Following her graduation from Middlebury she was a student at the University of Michigan and received her Master's degree from there in 1941. She was a clerk in the Army Medical Library in Washington and a chemist at the Sewage Disposal Plant in Washington until her marriage in 1943. She is survived by her husband, three sons, John, Thomas and Andrew, three sisters, Lois Whittier Batten, '40, Margaret Whittier Roache, '35 and Virginia Whittier Warthin, '33.

1939—Gordon A. Barrows, 47, died of a heart attack Oct. 2. He had done graduate study at Muskingum College and Vanderbilt following his graduation from Middlebury and received his doctorate in Clinical Psychology from Western Reserve University in 1952. Dr. Barrows had been a field representative for Muskingum College, assistant Director of Admissions at Middlebury, before serving with the Army Air Force Psychological Unit from 1942–45. For a year following World War II he was vocational adviser with the Veterans' Administration in Burlington and Rutland, Vt. He served as chief psychologist at the Veterans' Administration Hospital at Brecksville, O., and was chief of Personnel Evaluation at the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Toronto, Canada, until 1958. In May of that year he was made assistant professor in Clinical Psychology at the Indiana University Medical School and consultant in Psychology for the Department of Mental Health in Indianapolis, Ind. At the time of his death he was Director of the Division on Mental Retardation for the Dept. of Mental Health in Indianapolis. He leaves his widow, the former Frances Kostrevic, and a son, Robert. Dr. Barrows was a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

1942 Robert E. Dempewolff, 44, died suddenly at his home 8 Hilaire Dr., Huntington, N. Y., on Nov. 11. At the time of his death he was Executive Vice President of Dargan & Co., Inc., insurance adjusters. During World War II he served as a tank commander and participated in the invasions of Africa, Sicily and Normandy. He received the Bronze Star Medal for bravery. Survivors are his wife. Lucia Powell, '41, and two sons, Eric and Peter.

1948—The Rev. Leslie L. Van Dine, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Marquette, Mich., died Dec. 8. He served in the Army during World War II, was wounded at Cassino, Italy, and was the recipient of the Silver Star, the Distinguished Service Cross, the Italian Cross for Military Valor, the Combat Infantry badge and the Purple Heart. After graduating from Middlebury he attended Yale Divinity School where he received his B. D. degree in 1952 and was ordained that same year. The Rev. Van Dine held pastorates in Marietta and Altoona, Pa., before going to Marquette. He is survived by his wife, the former Lillie Lawrence, daughter Beverly and two sons, Leslie and David.

1950—Richard B. Hackett, 37, died in Sept. following a short illness. During World War II he served as an aerial gunner in the Ninth Air Force. He had been employed in a supervisory capacity with the New Jersey Hospital Service Plan in Newark. Survivors are his wife and three sons, John, Ralph and Krieger and a daughter, Karen.

Mrs. Pamelia Powell, secretary to President Paul D. Moody for nearly twenty years, died in Middlebury on Dec. 5. During her long career at the College, she was secretary to the Alumni Secretary, assistant in the Office of the Registrar, and in the summer of 1923 Mrs. Powell was in charge of the New York office of Middlebury's Million Dollar Fund Drive. She is survived by a daughter, Lucia Powell Dempewolff, '42, and two grandsons.
